

PURRRFECT!

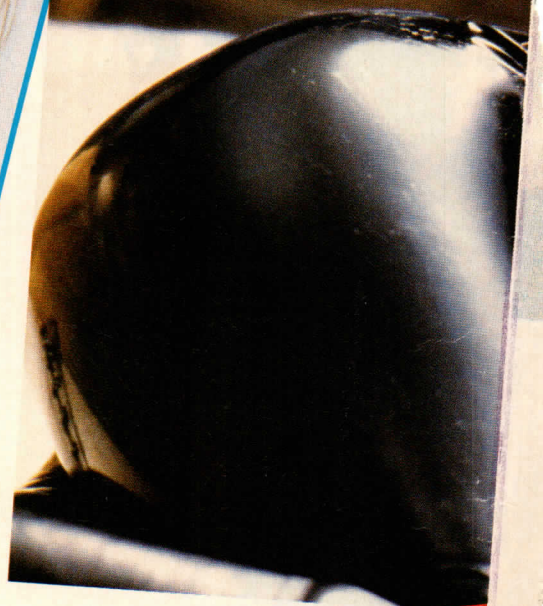

Pfeiffer goes feline for the Batman sequel ...but who would have thought of Michelle Monroe?

ONCE again, director Tim Burton's Batman set is shrouded in secrecy—complete with security guards who check that all copies of the script are accounted for.

But, despite Burton's explicit gag instructions on all the cast, exclusive photos of Michelle Pfeiffer, as Cat Woman in Batman Returns, have found their way to TV WEEK and the sultry actress looks positively purrrfect!

And just for something completely different, the actress took the opportunity to play a couple of other roles in a recent photo session. Michelle is well disguised as a Marilyn Monroe-style platinum blonde in our picture at left . . . but she's impossible to recognise as Laurence from Noel Coward's Private Lives!

LEFT: Michelle Pfeiffer as the Cat Woman and Danny DeVito as the Penguin in Batman Returns.
RIGHT: Michelle as she's never been seen before . . . as Laurence from Noel Coward's Private Lives.

The Cat Woman is one of two new arch-enemies for Batman (Michael Keaton). The other is the Penguin, played by Danny DeVito.

Michelle admits Batman Returns is her most physically challenging role.

"I can show you a bruise," she says with a laugh, rolling up her sleeve to display a big black mark on her arm. "It's my war wound!"

*From Jenny Cooney
in Los Angeles*

Batman pictures: Christian Lockhart

Other pictures: Visages/Colorific

TV WEEK, 29/2/92 7

